J.B. Harris didn't earn the nickname "The Corporate Killer" without showing some spine. And for a lawyer who was born to fight, and fights to win, he has the reputation to back it up.

The Miami-based personal injury attorney is currently suing Big Tobacco on behalf of 157 post-Engle clients or their families for smoking-related illness and death caused by addiction to nicotine. He has handled complex aviation disasters, including the $51 million settlement he helped to secure for the families of those killed in the Chalk's seaplane crash off Miami Beach; the Gol mid-air collision of a Boeing 737 with a corporate jet over the jungles of Brazil that killed 154 people; and the crash of an MD-82 charter aircraft in Venezuela in which 160 perished. Christmas also came early last year for 250 employees of WTVJ NBC 6, whose jobs J.B. saved by successfully suing to stop the sale of the station to WPLG Channel 10.

As a seasoned lawyer, fierce advocate and master strategist, with the ability to make juries feel the pain and suffering of innocent victims, J.B. is constantly on the lookout for new areas of liability where faulty products, defective devices, dangerous drugs, toxic substances, unsafe vehicles, boilers, presses, and properties have left people injured or dead. In the search for truth, J.B. has spent his career holding corporations accountable by forcing them to disclose incriminating information so that others will remain safe. "I jump out of bed every morning ready to fight against corporate negligence, bureaucratic indifference, and all of the challenges injured folks are forced to confront before getting the justice and compensation they deserve," says Mr. Harris.
